

Michael DiRamio

Assistant Director, Energy Affordability and Equity
New York State Energy Research and Development Authority
(NYSERDA)

Michael DiRamio co-directs strategy, policy and stakeholder engagement in support of creating affordable and accessible clean energy solutions for underserved and overburdened communities in the State of New York. In this role, he is leading efforts across NYSERDA's portfolio of programs to collaborate with environmental justice and low-income communities and ensure equitable benefits from state and utility ratepayer funded investments in building decarbonization, transportation electrification, and renewable energy generation.

Prior to joining NYSERDA, Michael worked in DC as a manager in the U.S. Department of Energy Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy, leading strategic initiatives with state and local government agencies focused on clean energy solutions and energy affordability for low income communities. He lived and worked for over a decade in the Detroit area, where he managed utility energy efficiency programs, advised Michigan Governor Granholm's administration and federal agencies on clean energy programs, and worked with major philanthropies on policy initiatives and investments focused on creating equitable opportunities for communities in the clean energy economy.
