

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

June 9, 2023

BCSE Statement in Response to the American Families and Jobs Act

Washington, D.C. – Lisa Jacobson, President of the Business Council for Sustainable Energy (BCSE), offered the following statement in response to the proposed American Families and Jobs Act, which would eliminate or modify several existing clean energy and transportation tax policies:

“Federal clean energy and clean transportation tax credits are driving billions of dollars of investment across the country. This momentum is contributing to the onshoring of manufacturing and the creation of jobs that are critical to creating a competitive, secure, and prosperous America. We urge Congress to maintain these key incentives and work together across political lines to deliver affordable and reliable clean energy solutions to Americans nationwide.”

###

The Business Council for Sustainable Energy (BCSE) is a coalition of companies and trade associations from the energy efficiency, natural gas, and renewable energy sectors, and also includes investor-owned utilities, public power, independent power producers, project developers, equipment manufacturers, and environmental and energy market service providers. Established in 1992, BCSE advocates for policies that expand the use of commercially available clean energy technologies, products, and services.

For more information on BCSE, please visit bcse.org. For the latest industry data, download the Sustainable Energy in America Factbook.