

Sophie Miremadi, VP Global Government Affairs and Public Policy, AVEVA

Sophie Miremadi is Vice President of Global Government Affairs and Public Policy at AVEVA. Sophie leads a team focused at the intersection of digital regulation and energy and industrial policy and manages relationships with a wide network of external stakeholders. She is responsible for AVEVA's engagement in global policy around digitization and the transformative power of data in accelerating the energy transition and circular economy, as well as for developing public-private partnerships that demonstrate how industrial enterprises and research organizations can collaborate in new ways to advance a connected, decarbonized industrial economy.

Sophie draws on experience in the UK government, as a strategy consultant, and in public policy in the financial services sector. She holds an MA in Modern History from Oxford University and an MBA from INSEAD Business School.